POP ART

Friday 17 February 2017 at 11 30 am

Art for people who don't like Art, but also for people who are so smart they can see the joke.

This lecture looks at Andy Warhol and Roy Lichtenstein (of course); the inventors of American Pop Art, and at Peter Blake, Richard Hamilton and Edouardo Paolozzi, the people who REALLY invented Pop Art, as well as the Films, Photography, Music, Comic Books and Advertising which inspired them.

We also explore the new and rich sources of inspiration available to Contemporary Pop Artists, including Graphic Novels, CGI, Gaming, Goth, Steampunk, and the ever-morphing front line between Fine, Applied, Popular, Industrial and Commercial Art.

Winter is Coming, so Live Long and Prosper.

Speaker:

Adrian Sumner is a practicing artist who has exhibited widely in Britain and Europe and is a graduate of Liverpool College of Art (long after John Lennon, sadly). He has worked as an illustrator, portraitist, exhibition curator, tour organizer and lecturer across Europe and in Russia. He is currently preparing an Exhibition of his work for the Grosvenor Museum, Chester, themed to Suprematism, the Great War, Icons and Catwoman--a typical cocktail of influences and inspiration.
